About 5:15 o'clook last evening an alarm of fire was turned in from box No. 136, at Willard's hetel. The alarm was occasioned by the discovery of fire in the flooring between the laundry and the engine-room below. These rooms are situated in the F-street end of the building, and the laundry is a little above the level of the street. The fire was caused by a defect in the fine extending up from the engine-room through the laundry floor, and easily made its way into the light wood work of the flooring. The fire apparatus at the hotel would not work properly, and had it not been for the prompt arrival and action of the fire department the result might have been most disastrous. As it was, the damage was slight, not amounting to more than $150. hotel. The alarm was occasioned by the discov

Finding of the body of Margaret Castle. The body of Margaret Castle, who has been nissing since October 80 from the canal-box Ensinger, was found in the canal, near Ray's dock, yesterday morning. It was supposed at the time that she was first missed that she had faller time that she was first missed that she had fallen into the eanal, but subsequently a fraitless search for her body, the water having been drawn from the canal in the vicinity and the receipt of the news from the Point of Rocks that she was at that place, led to the belief that the supposition of her death was incorrect. It is probable that she fell overboard on the day named, and that her body has been concealed under one of the boats in that vicinity ever since. The corener was notified, and upon examination gave a certificate of death resulting from accidental drawning.

part of next week. Kendrick was a soldier in the regular army, his company being stationed at Fort Foots, which is built on land ceded by this State to the General Government for the fort. It was a part of Frince George's county. The hombelde was committed on the wharf, which is on made land, extending beyond the bounds of the cersion to the United States for the fort, but used by the fort. It presents a nice question of jurisdiction, which the Circuit Court will have to determine, whether the right of user by the Government for the purposes of the fort gives jurisdiction to the United States courts. This question was not juste ally decided by the Prince George's County Court, by whose order the parties were turned over to the United States authorities. Redgers is indicated as an accessory and Kendrick as principal in the alleged marder. Hallmore is judicted as an accessory and Kendrick sipal in the alleged murder. - Baltimore A Profitable Day's Work.

The Ray. S. Harvey Appleton, from the standing committee on temperance, reported resolutions reciting the prevalence of a startling indifference to Christian temperance, declaring that debauchery, social distress and crime were rampant, and in view of these evils advised a strict maintenance of personal sobriety, the discouragement of all social indulgence in intexicating drinks, even at weddings, the use of pure wine only in the Lord's Supper, and the earnest pushing of practical measures to secure the enforcement of existing laws restricting the sale of intexicating beverages.

A lengthy discussion followed, during which Mr. Z. Richards, of Washington, said the great question with them was whether or not they should bring temperance into politics. The community is disgraced by liquor sailers and drikers, and it was the duty of Christians to secure prohibition through the Legislature. Churches and leading men were afraid to touch the subject, and the law-makers shun the very mention of it.

EURDAY-SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The sixth annual meeting of the Maryland and District of Columbia Baptist Sunday School Association was held during the afternoon and evening at High street church, after the adjournment of the Union Association, many of the delegates to which alto represented the Sunday schools. In the absence of the prosident, William Stickney, of Washington, the meeting was called to order at 2 o'clock by the first vice president, Joshua Levering. S. M. Yeatman, of Washington, was appointed temporary secretary in the absence of G. A. C. Smith.

The following officers were elected: President, Hiram Woods; vice presidents, S. H. Mirick, of Washington, and R. L. W. Probasso, of Talbot county; secretary, S. M. Yeatman; treasurer, Henry Taylor; executive committee, William Stickney, John P. Poler, E. B. Curtis, Dr. D. S. Foster, Geo. F. Guilck, B. P. Murray, C. U. Meador, of Washington; S. R. White, Rockville; J. C. Nichols, Georgetown; and Henry Taylor, Henry R. Crane, Wm. Miller, Joshua Lavering, James Pellard, Engene Healy and Wm. B. Graves, of Baltimore.

The report of the executive committee was read. Resolutions were appended to the report authorizing the executive board to use the lunds of the association as far as practicable for missionary work, and to continue the convention and fastistic work inaugurated this year until every school, white and colored, is visited.

Harvey Johnson, (colored,) pastor of the Northstreet church, said that colored churches had been slighted, although having paid their prorate of three hours.

The report and resolutions were adopted after a debate of three hours.

Catholicism has a hold on the colored people of the city and State.

The report and resolutions were adopted after a debate of three hours.

It was decided to publish a new hymn-book, and resolutions were passed desiring all teachers to observe total abstinence, and oppose the traffic of liquor.

These resolutions met with much opposition.

An English gentleman traveling in this country paid a brief visit to the White House yesterday, in company with a friend, and this is the way he writes about it :

writes about it:

Accepting the invitation with interest and pleasure, we made our way for the Treasury, a building that would make any stranger pause and hold his breath in a quiet cestasty of admiration. Entering we passed through to "The House." If there was one thing more than another that struck me, a stranger to the ways and habits of the country, it was the absence of red tapelem, or anything approaching form and ceremony around the doors of the edifice. No bullying beadles, great in cooked hats and insolent unclessness; no display of stiff and choked reddiery; nothing, in short, to awe the visitor and make him uncomfortable at the very first onset. Folliely we were shown upstairs to the waiting-room, where groups of people were conversing oom, where groups of people were conversing with an case and freedom most refreshing to be hold.

Introduction to the President's secretaries followed, and whilst my friend was ushered into the presence of General Grant, I, waiting for him, was again agreeably impressed with the fact that at last I was in a public office where the institution of circumlocution was unknown. Here pople with grievances and requests were palliely, set firmly, told whether the redressing of such grievances or the acceding to such requests was practicable or not at once. No dilly-dailying or shirking, or "call again to-morrow," or "I've no power in the matter, otherwise I would with all my heart," no putting the blame on other's shoulders to escape centure oneself. It seemed perfectly understood on both sides that when no was said no was meant, and there was an end to the matter. My friend coming back, we had a look at the drawing-room, and watched a photographer making pictures of the farniture, and then, after seeing overything there was to see, we went hotelward to dinner.

It must have hear a very continuous day at the we went hotelward to dinner.

It must have been a very ordinary day at the White House—a day of no consequence—not the slightest scintillation of a red letter to be discorned in it at all, but I never was so strongly impressed with the eminently self-governing character that a Republic lends to the institutions of a country, and more especially the firmly-established Republic of the States, or of the presenting the term President has, as I was at the end of that quarter of an hour in the White House.

The Bladensburg Railroad-Several gentlemen interested in the project of running a steam street railroad from the Capitol asburg met at the residence of Mr. liawkins Taylor, 200 First street northeast, last evening. Mr. H. N. Chapman explained the project, which is to run cars, propelled by small regimes similar to these used on the street rail-roads in New Orleans, from the intersection of Delaware avenue and O street along C to Maryland arenue and along that thoroughlare to the toil-gate, thence along the turnplike to the bridge at Bladensburg. The cars on the road can be reached at the depot on Capitol Hill by the Washington and Georgetown and the Metropolitan railroads and at the toil-gate by the Columbia road. It is the intention of the projectors to try and effect a system of transfers between their and the other roads named. The meeting last night was an I formal one, but at the next meeting, which is to be held at the same place on Thursday evening, the subject of a charter will be discussed.

A Thisving Tramp. Wednesday John Gilmore, a Scotchman by birth and a tramp by profession, entered the restaurant of James Foy and asked for a drink of whisky, but having no money, the request was not favorably considered by the proprietor. While Mr. Poy's back was turned, Gilmore walked off with a box of carpenters tools, the property of Mr. Edward Reynolds, which had been left for sate-keeping for a short time. The box was not missed for some time, and upon inquiry being made in the neighborhood, it was assortained that Gilmore had disposed of a saw and a hatchet for the small sum of ten cents each. Yesterday afternoon he was seen lurking around the shop of Isaac Beers, the builder, by Odloer Prather, and Gilmore, when discovered, ran down A street, but was captured by Officer Prather in the Capitol grounds, and conveyed to the Eighth precinct station house, where he was looked up, preparatory to being introduced to Judge Snell in the morning. Mr. Foy's back was turned, Gilt ore walked off

Criminal Court—Judge MacArthur. Supreme Court of the Unit

Criminal Court-Judge MacArthur-The first care called upon the opening of court yesterday morning was the one on trial at the ad-journment the day before, that of James H. Bu-erly, charged with the stealing of the Bible and journment the day before, that of James H. Beverly, charged with the stealing of the Bible and Sunday school books from the Christian church, Hon. Charles Pelham counsel for the acoused, Mr. Pelham, claimed an acquittal upon the plea that the indictment fixed the title of the property in the trustees instead of the church, and the cours so ordered, when Beverly was released.

The case of James Agi, the colored boy who plead "not guilty," when arraigned upon an indictment for burglary and laromy, was next called and tried, the jury soon bringing in a verdict of "guilty" as indicted.

Samuel H. Taylor and Wm. Richards, two deaf mutes, were arraigned and tried upon an indictment of grand laromy, Both plead guilty. Professor Gallaudet, of the Deaf and Dumb asylum, was present, and acted as interpreter.

Prof. Gallaudet testified to the bad character of the boys, saying that they had been expelled from the asylum for pillering. They both have the name of being pilferers and thieves.

The verdict rendered was "guilty as indicted," and Judge MacArthur sentenced them to two cars at hard labor in the penicentiary, stating that this would be a sufficient length of time for them to learn a trade.

The case of Emma Williams was the next called, she having plead "not guilty" to the indictment for grand laromy, but as she had no lawer, the court assigned Bir. Stone as Emma's counsel. Emma was charged with the laroeny of two slik dresses, one or two redispotes, overskirts, &c., from the house of Paul Bonivaires, where she had been employed as a servant.

Paul Benivaires, Mrs. Benivaires and Officer Sutton were the witnesses examined, and at the conclusion of their testimony the Court charged the vary, who, without leaving the court-room, returned the verdict 'guilty as indicted."

The case of John Moore, charged with the laroeny of a watch valued at $15. a watch chain valued at $15. a watch chain valued at $15. a watch considered by the chort at Bir counsel, when the cape was saigned by the Court as Bir counsel, when was saig

Taylor, colored, charged, arraigned and indicted for rape on Lizzie Bailey, a little colored girl twelve years of age.

Lizzie was brought into court, and upon being questioned by Judge MacArthur as to whether or no she understood the nature of an eath, was piaced upon the witness stand. She testified that upon several occasions Taylor who occupied a room in the bouse of her cousin, with whom she lives, had attempted to ravish her, and that on the Monday before the opening of school Taylor carried her to his room, and placing his hand over her mouth to prevent her acreaming, attempted to accomplish his purpose, injuring her seriously. He then told, her that if she dared tell any one he would come while her cousin was away from home and kill her.

Lettra Johnson, colored, sworn and examined: Is the cousin with whem Lizzie has lived for nearly a year; lives in an alley between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fith streets morthwest; Taylor occupied part of the Mouse in which she lives; witness goes out to wash every Monday; and on the 30th of August last went out to bring home her washing, leaving Liznie at home, and Taylor in his room. In a day or two afterwards she noticed the child seemed to suffer in walking, and upon questioning her she said that Norman Taylor had eaught her and, placing his hand over her mouth, carried her to his room, and throwing her upon a ted "hurt" her. She examined the child and found her in a terrible state. AN INQUIRY.

A Circle that is Not a Circle.

To the Editor of the National Republican: Sin: I desire, with your permission, most re specifully to make the inquiry why it is that the circle at the intersection of New Jersey avenue with 1 and Second streets northwest is suffered to remain so long in its present unfinished and un sightly condition? All the facts taken into cor sideration in connection with this unfinished "circle" would go far to show the most cruel in difference toward the citizens and property-hold difference toward the citizens and property-holders in this vicinity by and on the part of those who have the special charge of the public improvements in this particular part of the city.
A year and a half ago New Jersey avenue and Second street, from H to K street, were torn up and paved with wood, and the "circle" in question was laid out and the curbing set, and during all these long months it (the circle) has alternately been used as a gravel pit, and then again filled up with coal ashes and every variety of debris by any and every stray cartman who chose to make it a common dumping ground. Then it become in turn a lumber yard for a street contractor to store great quantities of rotten wooden blocks upon, and to this hour it lies here a waste filace—a most unsightly thing, an unquestionable nulsance—so that I am led to ask if the property-holders and residents in this vicinity have no claim to the esteem and consideration of the Commissioners or engineers, or wherein the property-holders have so offended as thus to merit the infliction of such a continued nuisance upon them? for an unqualified nuisance it is and has been, and remains, and is deserving only, in its present condition, of the prompt condemnation of the Board of Health. It should be either completed at once as designed or wholly removed.

If public improvements kept pace here with the extensive private enterprises recently inaugurated and now going on on all sides this would be one of the pretitest points in the city, and why our worthy Commissioners can rest and permit that which might be a "thing of beauty" to the and be an eyesore and an offense to the public, remains as much an unexplained mystery as it is to those meet interested an unexplained mystery as it is to those meet interested an unexplained mystery as it is to those meet interested an unexplained Partience. ers in this vicinity by and on the part of thes

The Mest Remarkable Remedy Ever Discovered HENSON'S CAPCIER POROUS PLASTER.
At no time in the history of true medicine has an article appeared which has met with greater approval and success than Benson's Capcino Pisster. Why they are preferred to all other perous plasters is owing to their improved comesition: they act instantaneously, cure speedily and effectually.

Physicians and the general public who acknowle edge the great benefits derived from the use of the ordinary porous plaster, however, maintain the ordinary percess plaster, however, maintain that their action is not sufficiently prompt, requiring time, patience and continuous wear to effect a cure. Benson's Capcine Plaster overcomes this difficulty by secomplishing in a lew hours that which it takes any other plaster as many days.

Although a recent discovery, Capcine has been thoroughly tested by physicians, and in each instance has been procounced the most remarkable, safe, certain and thoroughly efficacious remedy ever discovered.

safe, certain and thoroughly efficacious remedy ever discovered.

Incorporating Capcine in an improved Porous Plaster has been soccuplished after repeated solicitations from the medical fraternity, and is now prescribed by them with unprecedented success; especially in rheumatism, pleurisy, stubborn colds, kidney complaints and all diseases for which a perous plaster has been used.

Its marvelous influence over the circulation and general effect on the system is almost incredible; from the moment of its application to the affected part it operates with astonishing vigor—brings relief and cures more effectually than any known plaster, liniment or compound.

It is a genuine pharmaceutical preparation of the highest order of merit; its ingredicate are entirely vegetable and free from interal or motal poisons. One trial will convince the mest skeptical of its superiority over the ordinary porous plasters. When you desire prompt and immediate relief, ask your drugglat for Benson's Capcine Plaster. Price, 25 cents.

JEALOUSY AND DEATH.

Fifth-Avenue Love Story Ending in Suicide The following account of the suiside of Mingos Roane is taken from the New York Sun: The re mains of "Mingee" Roame, the girl who shot her-self in the "Fifth avenue building," at los Fifth avenue, on Tuesday evening, lay last night in a costly rosewood coffin in the roams of F. C. Senior, costly forewood comm in the rooms of F.C. Senior, undertaker, at 85 Sixth avenue. The coffin plate, of silver, bore merely the name and date of death, with the age, 21 years.

As far as can be ascertained, Miles Hoane came to New York from Bichmond, Va., about four years ago, leaving two brothers in her native town and a married sister in Baitimare. Twelve town and a married sister in Haltimore. Twelve meaths ago she met Mr. Thomas R. Whitney, a wealthy and extensively-known brewer, who does business at 675 Washington street, and became attached to him. He engaged a handsome suite of apartiments in the "Fitth avenue building," turnished them elegantly, and began to keep house with Miss Roane. They had one servant, a colored woman, who describes their life as having been entirely unruiffled, each seeming to be devoted to the other. Miss Roane, however, was uncombtedly quick-tempered and exceedingly jealous, frequently upbraiding Mr. Whitney for his attention to other women. She seems, also, to have distrusted herself, for on several occasions she begged the colored servant not to leave her alone.

she begged the colored servant not to leave her aione.

On Tuerday night Mr. Whitney, having fallen asleep on the bed in the centre one of their three spacious rooms, was awakened by the report of a pistol in the adjoining room, and hurrying in he found Miss Roane lying on the lounge, her hand pressed to her breast, from which the blood was flowing. A large navy revolver lay on the floor beside her. She tried to reply to his inquiries as to what had happened, but was unable to speak. He called the servant to watch her, while he ran to the Fifth-avenue hotel and summoned Dr. Anthony Ruppauer, but when he returned to the rooms with the physician the girl was dead. The servant said she died within a few minutes from the time he left her, alter vainly struggling to speak. Yesterday the body was removed to 86 Sixth avenue, and there an investigation was made by Coroner Elekhoff last night.

Sixth avenue, and there an investigation was made by Coroner Elekhofi last night.

Mr. Whitney was despiy affected, and at times could hardly control himself sufficiently to give his testimony intelligibly. "Mingee," he explained, was merely a pet hame, the young Seutherner's real name being Elizabeth G. Roane. On Tuesday evening he was with her at 130 Fifth avenue, where they dinned at half past six. About half an hour before dinner she mentioned the name of a lady with whom he had once been on terms of intimacy, and became somewhat excited, as she always did when they had been on terms of intimacy, and became somewhat excited, as she always did when the lady was spoken of. He avoided the subject as well as he could, and when they sat down at the table she was a little cold and reserved toward him, but she did not seem to be angry. They each drank three or four glasses of beer, which was much more than they usually drank. Mr. Whitney was fatigued, and after dinner he lay down on the sola and his compan on dispatched the colored girl to buy some chemonic. Aher the servant had gone out Mr. Whitney went to sleep. He was aroused by Milss Roane, or "Mingee," as he always called her, who put her arms around his neck and said, "Tom, you don't care for me any more." She was excited and distressed, and he replied, "Mingee, I'm tired; don't bother me new." He got up from the lounge, and going into the other room lay down on the bed and was soon asleep again. Within a few minutes she awake him the second time. She was more nervous and disturbed than before, and said, excitedly, "Tom, if you don't get up and talk to me you'll regret it forever."

These were the last words the young woman ever spoke to him; the last, with the scoeption of a few directions subsequently given to the servant, that ever passed her lips. Mr. Whitney alecylity replied,
"Go, Mingee, I'm for the form her was asleep yier yelled," and turning from her was asleep.

vante, that ever passed her lips. Mr. Whitney sieepliy replied.

"OH, MINGRE, DON'T BOTHER ME;
The very tired," and turning from her was asleep again in a few seconds. How long he slopt after this second awakening he was unable to say. Probably it was not more than half an hour before he was aroused, this time by no words of warning, but by the infallment of her half expressed threat. A pistol fired in the adjoining room startled him from his sleep, and springing from the bed, he rushed in. "Mingree" Rome was lying on the lounge, the blood flowing from a wound in her breast. She looked at him as he entered, and struggled hard to speak, but she could only pant and gasp for breath. He ran to her side, crying. "My God, Mingree, tut still no answer from the dying girl. He pulled her dress aside, and saw the marks of pewder and blood on the left breast, and a large, heatif whilst hole. He range the bell communighastly bullet hole. He rang the bell communi-cating with the servants' room overhead, and leaving the colored girl in charge, he hastened to the Filth-ayenue hotel, and returned with Dr. Ruppaner. The physician felt the pulse, and dropping the lifeless hand from his own, said "It is too late." The girl had been dead for some minutes.

Mr. Whitney and Dr. Ruppaner went together to the Thirtieth-street police station, and related the occurrence to Capt. Steers, and that officer accompanied them to the room in which the dead girl lay. "I never saw so lovely a face as her's was immediately after death," said Dr. Ruppaner. "She had not suffered at all, and her teatures were as composed and lifelike as though she was asleep."

tures were as composed and lifelike as though she was asleep."

LOW-SPIRITED.

After giving his testimeny last night Mr. Whitney broke down and sobbed aloud. "She was frequently low-spirited." he said, "and if I showed the slighted celdness or neglect toward her she burst into tears. On the other hand, if I spoke a kind word to her she threw her arms around my neck and kissed me. She often told me that if she lost my affection at any time she would not allow herself to live. I do not believe any two persons ever lived more happily together than we did, nor could there be a stronger bone of affection than that which bound us."

The pisted with which Miss Roane shot herself was a very heavy navy revolver with six chambers. It carried a ball four times as large as an ordinary pocket pisted, and seemed to be an old-fashioned French weapon. It belonged to Mr. Whitney, who always kept it supported over the mantle piece on two nails. It was found lying on the floor beside the lounge, and restine against the wall. Five of the chambers were loaded. The sixth had been discharged.

At the Union meeting last avening in the Congregational church, Rev. Dr. Sunderland flustrated the appropriating power of faith by a pasotical extempore discourse on the healing of the woman who had an issue of blood. On requests for prayer being called for by Dr. Rankin, Dr. S. asked prayers for himself and people, saying that he felt that both be and they needed healing and reviving. Prayers were offered by Dr. Butler, Rev. Mr. Freeman and others.

To-day, which is to be observed as a day of fasting and prayer throughout the country, at the request of Mr. Moody, for the success of the revival effort generally, there will be a prayermeeting at Dr. Sunderland's church at its a. m., and at McKendree chapel, on Massachusetts are mee, at Ip. m., to both of which all are cordially invited.
